

After 600 lessons (or a maximum of 900 in the case of special courses) the supported language course is over.

At the end of the basic language course, there is a practical test. In the succeeding intermediate language course your German skills are extended and new topics dealt with. To prepare you for the final language test a practice test is conducted shortly before the end of the intermediate language course. The result of this test enables you to assess your language skills.

The language course is followed by the orientation course with 100 teaching units. Should you already dispose of sufficient German language skills you can attend the orientation course without having attended any previous language course.

At the end of the language course, there is a German test for immigrants (DTZ). This tests whether your oral and written German skills are sufficient. After the orientation course you take the “Living in Germany” (LiD) test. Here you are examined on what you learnt in the orientation course. You can take part in the final test, free of charge. Once you have passed both tests, you receive the “Integration course certificate”.

If you do not demonstrate adequate German skills in the German test for immigrants (DTZ) (Level B1), you can repeat the intermediate language course (300 lessons) once. For this you should submit an application to the relevant branch office of the Federal Office for Migration and Refugees. The final test is then once again free of charge.

What does taking part in the integration course cost?

The Federal Republic of Germany bears a large part of the costs for the integration courses. You are obliged to pay a financial contribution each lesson to cover costs (cost contribution). For every section of 100 lessons you pay your contribution to the course provider before the beginning of the course.

Under certain conditions, you can be excused from the cost contribution. This is the case if you receive unemployment benefits II or receive cost of living support, or if you are in financial need for other reasons. Please submit an application at a regional office of the Federal Office for Migration and Refugees for this purpose.

Ethnic German repatriates do not need to pay any cost contribution.

Asylum seekers who have good prospects to remain in Germany, persons applicable according to § 60a par. 2 clause 3 of the Aufenthaltsgesetz (German Law on Residence), and persons with a residence permit in accordance with § 25 par. 5 of the Aufenthaltsgesetz must not pay the cost contribution.

If you have successfully completed the final examination within two years from when your authorisation to participate was issued, i.e. if you can evidence German language skills at B1 level, you can apply for half of the payments you have made to be refunded. Please submit your application to a branch office of the Federal Office for Migration and Refugees.

In addition, it is possible to obtain a full or partial reimbursement of travel expenses for the integration course if you are exempt from paying the cost contribution or are obliged to take part in an integration course. For this, you must submit an application to a branch office of the Federal Office for Migration and Refugees, which exists in every federal state.

Integration course for immigrants

What is an integration course?

The integration course is available to all immigrants who are permanent residents in Germany and who speak only a little German, or none at all. It is not intended for children and adolescents who are still going to school.

The integration course consists of a language course with 600 lessons, and an orientation course with 100 lessons. Apart from the general integration course, special integration courses are also offered for women, parents and adolescents, as well as immigrants who cannot yet read and write adequately. If you have been living in Germany for some time, but cannot yet speak Germany properly, there are special support courses for this purpose. Special integration courses can last up to 1000 lessons. If you learn particularly fast, for example because you have already learnt another foreign language, you can attend an intensive course with 430 lessons.

What do you learn in the language course?

You learn the vocabulary for all important areas of daily life and the working world. This involves such topics as shopping, public transport, contact with authorities, looking for accommodation, spending free time with friends and neighbours and everyday situations. You learn how to write letters in German, fill out forms, make telephone calls or apply for a job. You practise using familiar and new words correctly, and become confident speaking the German language.

What do you learn in the orientation course?

You become acquainted with Germany and learn the most important aspects of the laws and politics, culture and recent history of your new home. You receive information on your rights and duties, but also about German everyday life, traditions, regulations and liberties. The values of the democratic system in Germany are important subjects of the course. This involves, for example, religious freedom, tolerance and equal rights for different social groups.

Who can take part?

Foreigners with a residence permit starting from 2005

If you received a residence permit for the first time after 01/01/2005 and live permanently in Germany, you are legally entitled to take part in an integration course. If you cannot communicate in German, or only to a very limited extent, you are even obligated to participate. The Immigration Office will issue you with a confirmation of your right to participate.

Foreigners with a residence permit starting before 2005 and EU citizens

If you have been lawfully resident in Germany for some time or are a German citizen, you can likewise take part in an integration course. For this you must submit a written application for admission to an integration course.

This is possible at a regional office of the Federal Office for Migration and Refugees, which exists in every federal state. You can also apply to a course provider in your neighbourhood, who will assist you in applying.

Application forms are available from the Immigration Office, course providers and on the website of the Federal Office for Migration and Refugees (www.bamf.de/integrationskurs). You will also find a search engine on this Internet page that will help you find your responsible regional office or a nearby course provider. You can also turn to an advisory service for adult immigrants or the Youth Migration Service.

If the Federal Office decides that you are entitled to take part in an integration course, you will be granted admission. You lose the right to take part, however, if you do not begin the integration course within one year after you have registered with the course provider and you are responsible for this yourself.

If you receive unemployment benefits II and are (also) unable to find work because of deficient language skills, you are under obligation to take part in an integration course.

Ethnic German repatriates

Usually you are entitled to take part in an integration course free of charge. You are also entitled if you are listed as spouse or offspring in the admission certificate. The Federal Office of Administration will issue you with a confirmation of your right to participate.

German nationals

As a German national you can take part in an integration course if your knowledge of German is deficient and you are particularly in need of integration. For this you must submit a written application for admission to an integration course to a branch office of the Federal Office for Migration and Refugees, which exists in every federal state.

Asylum seekers who have good prospects to remain in Germany, persons applicable according to § 60a par. 2 clause 3 of the Aufenthaltsgesetz (German Law on Residence), and persons with a residence permit in accordance with § 25 par. 5 of the Aufenthaltsgesetz

You can submit your application to be accepted onto the integration course at the Federal Office for Migration and Refugees. Some asylum seekers will be obliged to take part in the integration course upon being granted asylum. This is then possible if you have good prospects to remain in Germany¹ and receive benefits in accordance with the Benefits for Asylum Seekers Act (Asylbewerberleistungsgesetz). Your responsible benefits authority can demand you be accepted onto an integration course. They can put in an application at the Federal Office for Migration and Refugees for you to take part in the course.

What is the next step?

In principle you are free to choose an integration course provider authorized by the Federal Office and to register for an integration course there with your certificate of eligibility. In order to enable those who are obliged to take part in an integration course to do so in a timely manner, the Federal Office can, however, assign them to a particular course provider with a suitable course offer. Those who are entitled to take part in an integration course may be referred by the Federal Office to a particular course provider with a suitable course offer, in order to enable a timely participation in the course. In both cases, the Federal Office will take into consideration the fact that the courses should begin as soon as possible and be easily accessible to you.

The language course of the integration course consists of several parts, the course sections. The basic language course has three sections, each with 100 lessons.

The advanced course, too consists of three sections of 100 teaching units each. In an assessment test, it is determined which section matches your language skills. You always take part in the section which best corresponds to your personal knowledge and abilities and your individual learning pace.

During your integration course, you can switch from one section to another, skip sections or repeat them. If you regularly take part in a course, the course provider will provide you with a corresponding certificate on request.
